CIRCLING the CIRCLE

—The only Work many people know writes bridge books.

—According to recent estimates every third person in the United States works for a living.

—Tomato juice has been found equal to orange juice in preventing scurvy among children.

—The cucumber was in everyday use in China centuries before the birth of Christ.

—The demand for ostrich feathers has declined to the point where the feathers are used for dusters.

—Don't shoot until you can see the whites of their eyes, is the old order. But they say that in Nicaragua that's just 1,000 miles away.

—The recent Atlantic storm tossed a lot of lobsters on the beaches. Some places they don't need a storm to do that.

—A San Francisco man is teaching his hens to crate their eggs as they lay them. He refuses to count his eggs before they are boxed.

—A school of catfish attacked bathers in South America. Well, you couldn't blame the Indians for fighting back either.

—The total olive crop production in Greece for 1927-28 is estimated at 7,460,000 gallons of edible olives, and 20,515,000 gallons of olive oil.

—Total orders booked for electrical equipment by 86 manufacturers for 1927 totaled $954,883,416 as compared with $1,011,870,102 for 1926.

—The total funded debt of the Dominion of Canada on Dec. 31, was $2,442,228,463, a reduction of about $38,000,000 as compared with Dec. 31, 1926.

—The teachers were given salary raises recently, says a newspaper dispatch. The item happened to be from Wellington, New Zealand, however.

—Something new in catching motor car thieves is used by John Whittaker, of Pawtucket, R. I. When he leaves his car for any time he fills the gasoline tank with water. It worked once, the machine stalling handily near a traffic policeman.

—Developments of rabbits with fur like sable has reached perfection, it is announced. They are called sable rabbits and G. A. Drake, secretary of the British Sable Rabbit club, stated that it was hard for experts to distinguish the sable rabbit's fur from real sable.

—In Belfast, Me., is a black and white coon kitten that loves above all else a saltine, preferring it to meat or fish, and will even uncover the cracker box and steal one in order to satisfy its taste. When the cracker is accompanied with a bit of cheese or an olive, so much the better. The kitten is also fond of vegetables, especially spinach and cabbage. Its mother was born in a grocery store and lived there, and during her three years of existence ate nothing but hamburger steak. Never, as far as her master could determine, did she drink water or milk.

—Controversy rages over the identity of the meanest man. A Kansas town reports the lowest form of male as one who invited people to his home, then stole the oil from the crankcases of their cars. . . . In Kentucky a woman is seeking a divorce from her husband because he held the baby upside down. . . . Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Kellogg have begun to suspect the honor belongs to Mr. Borah, the correspondent. . . . A movie actress tells the world he's the one who refused to contest her divorce suit. . . . Wonder whom Peggy Joyce would nominate?

—The hobby of a janitor 250 years ago opened the way for science to wage war on microbes and also he enlisted their aid in the fight for health. The janitor was Anthony Leeuwenhoek, native of Holland, whose hobby was grinding lenses. Microscopes had been highly developed, being merely hand lenses that would hardly make a dime look as big as a quarter.

Leeuwenhoek, it is reported, made better and better lenses with the fanatical persistence of a fanatic. He examined everything and finally, when he looked through his toy gold-mounted lens at a fractional small drop of rain water he discovered there were little animals in it, swimming and playing around. These were microbes, and he was the first man to see them.

Indiana Fugitives Believed To Be Held In Ohio

ASSERT BOYS ESCAPED FROM THEIR GUARDS

Authorities at St. Clairsville Capture Youths After Gun Battle.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Feb. 15, (INS)—Two youths, thought to be John Burns and Samuel Baxter, who escaped last week from deputy sheriffs while being taken to the Indiana reformatory at Pendleton, are being held in the county jail here today, while Indiana authorities are enroute to view them. The boys registered as Frank Fornes and Albert Jennings, Youngstown, O. The two deputy sheriffs who had Burns and Baxter in custody have not been seen since they left Lafayette with their prisoners.

Arrested After Chase.
The youths were arrested late yesterday by sheriff's deputies after they are said to have driven away from a filling station without paying for their fuel. After a short chase with the deputies in pursuit the boys abandoned their auto and made for an adjacent wood. In the wood, the deputies say, the boys ordered them to halt and fired upon them. The sheriff's men returned the fire, bullets striking one of the boys in the leg.

The auto which the boys are said to have abandoned here, Sheriff Hardesty reported, contained a road map on which routes were traced from Decatur, Ill., to Coffeyville, Kans., Memphis and Cincinnati. At noon yesterday an auto was reported stolen at Columbus, and it was this auto the boys drove to St. Clairsville, authorities say. An auto stolen earlier yesterday at Springfield, O., was abandoned in Columbus.

Wrists Injured.
One of the boys, it is said, has an injured left wrist, and the other (Continued on Page Two)

GUSMAN AGAIN NAMED TO AID CAMP PROJECT

Circleville Resident to Receive Local Applications For Summer Training.

C. S. Gusman, of 423 South Scioto street, has received formal notification from Edward M. Williams, State Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War for Ohio, of his re-appointment as chairman for Pickaway county in charge of enrollment of eligible young men for this year's Citizens' Military Training Camps.

Campaign plans which Chairman Gusman received from the State Aide, provide for county quotas being allotted to each county in the Fifth Corps Area which comprise the states of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia. Chairman Gusman will appoint a group of local chairmen throughout the county to assist him in enrolling young men between the ages of 17 and 24 who are of good moral character, the average intelligence and physically fit.

With hundreds of camps held this year throughout the entire land, government officials expect the response from young men to more than exceed the number of vacancies allotted. Only those who complete the necessary requirements early, Chairman Gusman explained, are assured of a place at camp.

TRIAL SLOWED UP BY CLASHES OF ATTORNEYS

Slow Progress Being Made in Hearing of James Flint, Charged With Murder.

Progress in the trial of James Flint, alias Walter Brown, colored, charged with first degree murder in connection with the slaying of John Henry Hill, also colored, on Nov. 14, 1927, is making only slight progress due to the arguments of the opposing counsel over the admissibility of testimony concerning the conversation which took place the night of the killing in the kitchen of the Charles Byrd home.

This controversy temporarily halted the trial Tuesday afternoon while the court stenographer went over her notes to see if the state, in the examination of its witnesses, had asked anything concerning what was said in the Byrd kitchen.

This procedure held up the trial until 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon when the court announced that decision on the arguments would be reserved and Ed Lowe, who precipitated the issue, was asked to retire and John Morgan was called to the stand.

Morgan testified that Earl Mallett, one of the state's reputed eye witnesses to the slaying and who had accused Flint, was intoxicated the day of the shooting and that Mallett had been drinking canned heat. He also said that Mallett was intoxicated when he reported the shooting of Hill.

A fiery argument between the opposing lawyers started over the admission of evidence about a gun at a dance over at Washington C. H. The state was attempting to tie up the gun with Flint as he was at the dance with Morgan and others, Morgan, a taxi driver, said that the crowd he took to the dance was not sober nor drunk, but just happy.

Wednesday morning Morgan was recalled to the stand and testified that Oscar Galloway, colored, was at the scene of the murder with four or five other men when he went there in company with Sheriff Davis. Morgan, on cross examination, admitted that (Continued on Page Two)

Meg Malone To Aid Readers Of Herald To Solve Problems

Every one knows, that is, every one who has any sense of proportion, knows that young folks have a great deal of trouble. Every day, in every way, problems arise in our daily lives that must be solved, about which we feel we must talk to someone—ask their advice, so to speak and then do as we please.

Now this "someone" must be wise as a serpent, harmless as a dove and as deep as one of Ring Lardner's jokes.

After an exhaustive search we think we have found just the right one and we solicit your patronage. Send in your particular problem and we will solve it for you. Real or imaginary, it makes little difference for sometimes the imaginary troubles are hardest to bear.

Address all communications to Meg Malone, in care of The Circleville Herald, Circleville, and let us help you.

SEWER TROUBLE CLOSSES SCHOOL

The pupils attending the High street school were given a forced vacation Tuesday, owing to the fact of the sanitary sewer, with which the school building is connected became clogged. Ground was torn up on High street to reach the sewer and see where the trouble is located.

BLAZE DAMAGES AMANDA TEA ROOM

The Merle Johnston tea room at Amanda, was damaged to the extent of $250 when it caught fire early Saturday evening. According to Mr. Johnston gasoline leaking from a tank of the Palm Oil Co., adjacent to his building, got into his basement and the fumes ignited by sparks from an electric motor caused an explosion.

The Amanda volunteer fire department with their chemical equipment did quick work in extinguishing the blaze.

GROUND COULD THEN BE USED FOR FACTORIES

Thomas Jeffries Declares Preparedness and Aggressiveness Needed Here.

New industrial possibilities of Circleville were outlined to members of the Chamber of Commerce at their regular weekly dinner meeting in the Masonic Temple Tuesday night when Thomas Jeffries suggested that the bed of the old canal passing through the city be utilized for factory sites.

The recommendation of Mr. Jeffries was made when he was asked to answer the query, "How can a Chamber of Commerce obtain money to get new industries when the opportunities present themselves?"

The money question was dismissed by Mr. Jeffries with the suggestion that it could be obtained by strict economy and ceasing to make small donations to various causes for which the Chamber of Commerce received no credit and which soon total a large amount.

Acquire Canal Beds
He advanced the idea that in all parts of Ohio municipalities have been acquiring from the state the beds of abandoned canals which formerly passed through their communities. These canal lands have been acquired for factory, park and boulevard projects, he said.

Mr. Jeffries asserted he saw no reason why the canal bed through Circleville could not be acquired similarly from the state. Obtaining this land at a small cost, he pointed out, large one story factory buildings could be erected which would undoubtedly attract industry to this city.

Attention of the Chamber of Commerce members was called by Mr. Jeffries to the fact that the Mid-West mills are now located in Circleville because many years ago buildings were available for occupancy by the old Strawboard company. This, he said, was also true of the Winorr canning plant and the Goeller Broom company, before fire destroyed the plant of the latter company.

Urges Aggression
Aggression, instead of watchful waiting, was urged by Mr. Jeffries as the best means of bringing new industries to Circleville. He advised that the city prepare itself to receive new enterprises and collect the data on its advantages so that when the opportunity is presented, facts and selling talk will clinch the proposition.

Ed Sensenbrenner and Frank Barnhill were in charge of Tuesday night's gathering and they had prepared questions which pertained to the civic problems of Circleville.

The question of the Chamber of Commerce replacing waste paper receptacles on the streets in the business section revealed that the present cans are worn out. Bob Brehmer was named by T. O. Gilliland, chairman of the meeting, to investigate the cost of the containers.

Other members of the board are as follows: W. H. Skinner, of Perry township; Edw. Krelde, of Pickaway township; G. M. Wertman, of Washington township; and George C. Gerhart, of Jackson township.

The Pickaway Livestock Cooperative has just passed through a very successful business year, handling 636 floors of livestock with a total market value of $960,828.

MAN HURT WHEN CAR HITS BRIDGE

Sherman Lantz, of near Stoutsville, driving a Chevrolet coupe early Sunday morning is said to have fallen asleep and his car ran into a culvert near Delmont. Lantz who was alone, received a badly sprained left wrist, a severe chest bruise and a slight laceration over the forehead. Dr. C. A. Kiefauber of Stoutsville, dressed the man's injuries.

The coupe was damaged to the extent of a broken front wheel, windshield the front end caved in badly and fenders smashed.

Sad Tale Told Of Widow's Charm In Old Newspaper

A widow had the same fatal attractions a century ago as are credited to some of the bereaved women of today, according to an advertisement appearing in The Aurora, a newspaper published at Philadelphia, Pa., in December, 1804. A copy of this old paper was brought to The Herald office by James S. Swearingen, of Jackson township, who found it among papers which have been in the possession of the family for more than 100 years.

This is the advertisement and its sad tale:
"The subscriber having for some time past suffered extremely by a fatal connection and acquaintance with a certain Mary Asboth, of the Northern Liberties, (a suburb of Philadelphia), widow, hereby cautions and forewarns all persons whatsoever, not to trust or give credit to her on his account as he will not pay any debts of her contracting, she having already caused the sale of his house and property, and made him to be sued and compelled to pay debts which should have been paid by her late husband's estate."

"40-HORSE HITCH" DRIVER IS DEAD

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 15—(INS)—Death in the local poorhouse has claimed Jim Thomas, who drove the "40-horse hitch" of the Barnum and Bailey circus bandwagon. He would have been buried in Potter's field today, but for a telegram received from Sarasota, Fla., from Tom Lynch, boss hustler of the circus, guaranteeing funeral expenses.

FATAL CRASH TAKES PLACE AT FRANKLIN

Gordon Anderson, Employed By Sturm and Dillard, Is Run Down Along Road.

Gordon Anderson, 38, of Circleville, was injured fatally when run down by a hat-skip motorist about 6:30 p. m., Tuesday when he was walking along the Circleville-Chillicothe road near Franklin station.

He was picked up by a passing motorist and taken to the City hospital at Chillicothe where he died at 8:45 p. m. He had sustained a broken arm and leg, fractured skull and internal injuries.

Anderson, the son of the late Harry Anderson, of Pickaway county, was employed until 10:30 a. m., Tuesday by the firm of Sturm and Dillard for whom he had worked for a number of months.

After being paid off he went to Franklin station to visit Miss Bertha Rueb, residing near there. He left the Rueb home about 6 o'clock for the station to catch a traction car into Chillicothe.

He was unconscious when picked up and he was identified only by a picture of Miss Rueb, on which her name was inscribed and which he had in his pocket. Miss Rueb identified the accident victim.

It is said Anderson worked in Circleville a number of years for the B. and O. railroad, but later went to Seattle, Wash., returning here to work for Sturm and Dillard company in the Chesapeake and Ohio construction.

Both parents are said to be dead and a brother was killed in the World war. The dead man is a cousin of former Sheriff William Anderson, of Pike county.

Funeral services have not been arranged.

Columbus Cop Captures Fugitive Outside of Circleville After Pursuit.

Patrolman C. M. Walcott, of the Columbus police force was too slow for Oscar Coleman, of 102 Innis avenue, Columbus, when he undertook to arrest Coleman in Columbus Monday. Coleman was wanted on the charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Coleman hit the pike and came down the Scioto trail with the policeman in hot pursuit. Near the Pickaway county line, the policeman's car ran out of gas and he commandeered the auto of George and E. H. Evans, and continued the chase. As Coleman approached Circleville, the policeman fired two shots at the fleeing driver and he was forced to stop when his car went into a ditch. He was taken back to Columbus for a hearing.

Wins $8,000,000 Judgement In Damage Suit; Now Wants It Tripled

DUKE ESTATE IS DEFENDANT IN LAW SUIT

Discoverer of Valuable Mineral Deposits in Canada Makes Conspiracy Charges.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 15—(INS)—George D. Haskell, who was awarded $8,000,000 by a jury last night in his $45,000,000 suit against the estate of the late James B. Duke, now wants the award tripled. Homer F. Cummings, attorney for Haskell, announced today he would ask United States Judge William N. Runyon tomorrow to have the award increased to $24,000,000.

Haskell will seek the additional award under the section of the Sherman Act, which allows triple damages to a man injured by a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Haskell is the head of the Bausch Machine and Tool Company. After discovering bauxite and aluminum deposits in Canada, he arranged to start operations with waterpower controlled by James B. Duke along the Saguenay river in Quebec. When he had arranged a partnership with the tobacco man, Haskell charged, Duke went over to the Aluminum Company of America, and Haskell was left in the lurch. Duke and the Aluminum Company developed the project.

It was alleged that Duke received $25,000,000 worth of stock in the aluminum company.

The $8,000,000 verdict is said to be the largest ever returned in favor of a single individual in a damage suit. Counsel for the defendant plan to take an appeal from the verdict.

CHICAGO FLYER TAKES OFF FOR BRITISH PORT

Captain Donnellan Starts From Cuba on New Leg of His Good Will Tour.

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 15—(UP)—Captain Joseph Donnellan, who is on a good will tour to South America, took off from Columbia flying field at 3:05 a. m., today for the British Honduras.

Only a few people were at the flying field to watch his get-away, which was perfectly made. He circled the field, waved that everything was all right, circled over the main part of Havana twice and then was away on his flight.

Captain Donnellan's flight today will be over a 650 mile course, most of which is over water.

He planned to go by way of Cape San Antonio, the Island of Mujeres off Yucatan, Carzamel Isles, Point Herrero, Ambergis Reef and finally to land at Belize.

He is flying in a single seated Waco plane and carried no radio equipment.

The flight the St. Joseph, Mich., flyer is undertaking will be about 13,000 miles when he successfully returns to the United States. He hoped to be able to establish a commercial route through most of South America, hooking up the Northern and Southern continents.

Emanuel Waite Claims E. J. Lighty, Jr., Hit Wagon With His Truck.

Emanuel Waite has filed an action for damages against E. J. Lighty, Jr., in common pleas court, in which he asks damages in the sum of $7,500.

The plaintiff claims that on Jan. 2, 1928, while driving a team of horses hitched to a wagon in a southerly direction on the Scioto trail, he was hit by the defendant's truck going in the same direction, just north of South Bloomfield, and his wagon was wrecked, a hog in the wagon he was hauling was killed, and his team of horses injured. He also claims that he was personally injured, and asks judgment to cover costs of medical attendance, injuries to himself and horses, and also for time lost.

J. F. Henderson, of Columbus, represents the plaintiff.

SUES FOR DIVORCE

Mary E. Lanman has filed a suit for divorce from Howard E. Lanman in common pleas court.

The parties were married in Covington, Kentucky, April 4, 1924, and she was deserted by her husband five days following her marriage, and she has not seen or heard from him since, the petition says.

She asks the court in her petition not only for a divorce on the ground of abandonment, but also asks to be restored to her maiden name of Mary E. Pontious.

Charles H. May represents the plaintiff.

Mothers Must Watch These Seven Points in Care of Baby

Try to Check Up on Your Own Personality

By DR. LOUIS E. BISCH

WE all have our strong points and our weak points and it is the blending of these character traits that, like a composite picture, reveal our personalities.

Few of us separate the wheat from the chaff when it concerns ourselves and hence many do not understand why their personalities are weak or strong or neutral, as the case may be.

Consider the following and see how you measure up.

Are you truthful?
I do not mean whether you tell lies to others. Do you lie to yourself? Do you invariably "call a spade a spade" when it concerns yourself, even if it hurts?

Are you loyal?
Can your friends and associates and family invariably bank on you? Do you possess "stick-to-it-iveness"?

Are you steady in pushing forward even if your job is distasteful? Do you know English?

Of course you can make yourself understood. But are you able to handle the language in a way that is clear, concise, idiomatic and effective?

Do you know how to dress?
Expensive clothes is not what I mean. Do you achieve distinction in your dress? Are your clothes an ornament to you, enhancing your appearance, or do you look as though you were taking your clothes out for a walk?

Are you tactful?
Do people like you? Are you negatively bestowing praise? Do you work well with other people? Are you successful at team-work?

Are you continually on the alert looking for slights? Are you suspicious about the motives of others? Can you stand criticism?

Are you friendly?
Do you like meeting people and mingling with them? Are you cheerful?

Do you hang your head when things go wrong and make others feel as though they were to blame? Do you look healthy?

Is your gait elastic and vigorous? Does your posture suggest strength and force? Is your breath sweet and clean and are your teeth in perfect condition?

Do you look guilty?
So many individuals go about looking as though they had committed some criminal offense and were about to be apprehended any minute.

Have you the strength of your own convictions?
Do you really know what you want?

Can you make up your mind? Can you resist persuasion and suggestibility until logic and reason are presented to make you change?

Are you a procrastinator?
Do you tend to put off until tomorrow what you might quite readily do today?

Study these points carefully.
Check each one and see how you score.

Don't do it hastily. Think it over before you bring in a verdict on yourself.

To recognize yourself for what you really and honestly are, is the first big, constructive step toward improvement.

Famous Composers

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

Pierre Leonard Leopold Benoit.

ONE of the foremost of the Flemish composers, Pierre Benoit, who afterwards changed the "Pierre" to "Pete" when he endeavored to found an entirely Flemish school of music, was born in Harlebeke, Flanders, on August 17, 1834.

In 1851, Benoit entered the Brussels Conservatory, his earlier studies having been directed by his father and an organist in the town where he was born. While at the conservatory, where his studies were directed chiefly by Fetis, Benoit wrote a "small opera" which was produced in the Park Theater, where he afterwards became conductor. In 1856, he won the Prix de Rome with his cantata "Le Meurtre d'Abel."

The money which this award carried, enabled Benoit to travel through Germany, where he studied in Berlin, Munich, Dresden and Leipzig. In 1861, the Theatre Lyrique in Paris, accepted one of his operas, and while waiting for its production, Benoit acted as conductor at the Bouffes Parisiens. However, his opera was not produced in Paris, and Benoit returned to Antwerp.

In 1867, he founded the Flemish School of Music, which later was instituted as the Royal Flemish Conservatory and Benoit was appointed Director.

Benoit's dream was to found a school of typically Flemish musical composition, but his own composi-

Pierre Benoit.

tions show the strong influence of French and German music.

In addition to his prolific musical compositions, Benoit also wrote a number of essays on musical subjects.

His sacred music embodies Benoit's theories of Flemish music to a greater extent than any other of his compositions. The finest example of this is the tetralogy consisting of the "Messe Solennelle," the "Cantata de Noel," a "Te Deum," and a "Requiem."

Benoit died in Antwerp, on March 8, 1901, without reaching the goal which he had set as his life work.

THERE is an old Japanese proverb which says: "When all praised the peacock's tail, the birds cried 'Look at his legs, and what a voice!'" Also there is a Scotch saying, "Bonny feathers dinnae mak' bonny birds." Of course, to offset these maxims we have "Fine feathers make fine birds," as well as the old French proverb, "Clothes do much to make a man." So that all these sayings seem almost paradoxical. And in these modern times how often one hears from the lips of one of the fair sex the disparaging remark, "Of course she is attractive. With all the gorgeous clothes she is wearing anyone would look beautiful." Fortunately, much might be said on both sides. The proud beauty adorned with exquisite jewels, and fine peacock feathers may lack nothing in fascination and may easily conquer many hearts. On the other hand, the bewitching unadorned maiden who smiles so wistfully certainly possesses a great deal of charm, character and allurements. So one must say, each one to his taste.

ABSORBING SEQUEL TO "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Madge Finds an Impatient Dicky Upon Her Return From the Tickers.

MRS. TIGER'S worried face and her parting words to me: "Maybe you and Miss Underwood can figure out some way of helping her," troubled me all the way back to the farmhouse. But I had to put them aside when I reached the veranda, for Dicky's frown told me that I had committed the unpardonable sin of keeping him waiting for luncheon. The fact that my absence had been upon an errand of his did not mitigate his impatience.

"For spading up the lettuce bed!" he exclaimed as I came up the steps. "Have you and Mrs. Tiger been comparing family trees? Katie's having a fit in the kitchen because her omelet is being spoiled by waiting."

"Why didn't you go on and eat it then?" I asked with a carelessness which I know is more infuriating to him than any wrathful answer I could give.

Dicky's frown darkened, and I knew that he was as angry at himself for forgetting our pact of courteous formality as he was at my tasks my impulsive periphery had been has—this guarding his impatient speech when talking to me.

Lillian rose abruptly and walking across to me, thrust her hand beneath my elbow.

"Don't let him delay the game any longer," she said with superb impudence. He may be able to get sustenance out of saving the air and shouting, but I'm starving and I imagine you are. Your news will keep until after luncheon when Katie is safely back in the kitchen again."

She hurried me into the dining-room and Dicky followed us sulking. Fortunately Mother Graham was enjoying the luxury of a tray in her room, something in which we indulge as her as frequently as she wishes it, so I did not have to meet her always certain displeasure when anyone keeps a meal waiting, and the others at the table were not captious.

But Dicky was magnificently dour, and elaborately courteous. When the meal was over and we three were again upon the veranda—I had signaled Katherine to see that we were not disturbed—Lillian put both hands upon the lapel of his coat and shook him vehemently.

"Look here, young fella me lad," she said, explosively. "I'm not used to this rarefied air and I refuse to breathe it any longer. Just take a nose dive or hand me a parachute. I don't care which."

No matter how stubbornly angry Dicky is, Lillian is always able to bring him to time, chiefly, I fancy, because he knows the absolute futility of arguing with her. She has an uncanny facility of always winning the victory in any contention. But when he took her hands from his shoulders and kissed her with apparent friendliness, I guessed that in reality he was yearning to box her ears. That Lillian shared my conjecture I knew when she laughed immediately at him.

"The stage kiss with a yen for a slap in the mind of the kisser—and the kisses"—she said. "But it will do. Go on, Madge, spill the beans. What did Mrs. Tiger say?"

With the reservation of most of Mrs. Tiger's conversation for Lillian's private ear, I told of my neighbor's assurance that no news of the sketches made of Miss Lincoln by Dicky would go out from the Tiger family.

"And I put the fear of God into Katie and all the rest of the family here while you were gone," Lillian commented. "They're all sewed up for the winter. But what about Noel Veritzen and young Mr. Jackson? They spend a good deal of time at the Larches, don't they? Do they know about the sketching?"

What You Should Weigh

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

LAST week I promised to print a weight scale that has been approved by fashion experts, beauty specialists and doctors, so that every woman could have a reliable standard upon which to base her own needs for reducing or gaining weight.

In the compilation of this chart of weights two basic things were considered—physical health and beauty. Without health there can be no true beauty and with health there is a sound structure upon which to build beauty.

The table of weights is for women and is based entirely upon age and height. For example, the fifteen-year-old girl who is four feet and eight inches tall should weigh one hundred and one pounds.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE KINGDOM—Thy kingdom, O Lord, is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.—Psalm 145:13.

PRAYER—Our Father—Thy Kingdom come.

Child Marriages.

The New York League of Women Voters is favoring a law which would prohibit girls from marrying under 16 years of age, except in cases where parents give consent, or the union is permitted by the courts. According to statistics, the number of girls who marry under 16 has been steadily increasing.

Such a fact is what one might expect considering the precocity of modern children. They declare independence of their parents at an earlier age. Many of them consider they are grown up by the time they are 14. They think they are ready to go out in the world, and they dream what fun it would be to escape from the parental nest and manage their own affairs.

Children may be more mature mentally at any given age than they used to be. Their improved education and the many contracts they have with the world give them a wider knowledge of things. But they have not had much more practical experience, and their knowledge is of a theoretical nature. They are as capable of making serious mistakes as they ever were. Perhaps more so, because they do not take the advice of their parents as well as they used to.

At the age of 16, not many young people are fit to choose husbands or wives. They are likely to make mistakes that may cause them life-long regret. They are liable to the sudden fancies of "calf love," which would seem silly to them in a few years. They should wait until they have a little more insight into human nature.

Too many boys and girls are dreaming of the opposite sex, at an age when they should be kicking up their heels on the playgrounds. They think they are men and women, but at heart they are only children. The birds should stay in the nest until their wings are grown a little stronger.

The White House Flag.

Gridley Adams of New Rochelle, N. Y., chairman of the National Flag Code committee, tells a congressional committee that flag ethics are violated by our White House.

The eagle on the president's flag, it seems, points the wrong way. This has pained Mr. Adams, and he wants something done about it.

Probably he's right. These sticklers for points of etiquette usually are. But somehow, for the life of us, we can't get excited about it.

We hope it is not unpatriotic for us to remark that there is just a wee bit too much fussing nowadays about "ethics of the flag." After all, the flag itself is the important thing. It is a symbol of our country and the love we have for it; an emblem of our patriotism. So that it be honored in spirit, who cares whether the formal details be absolutely letter perfect?

Too much officious attention to minor points doesn't do a bit of good.

With all due respect to that gallant sportsman, Sir Thomas Lipton, we were never able to get much of a kick out of those widely-advertised yacht races to which he is everlastingly bringing new boats.

They are so hedged about by restrictions, time allowances, rules and regulations that they lack appeal to the average landsman. If the wind is stiff, the great sloops do not race; if it is light, they jog along so slowly that the punch of the contest is lost.

This summer, however, here will be a yacht race "as is a race." The king of Spain is offering a cup for a yacht race from New York to Spain. A large number of sea going craft have entered already, and you can look for some real thrills when the race takes place.

Transatlantic yacht races have been held before and they are contests for real sailors. So darily do the yachtsmen crack on sail that the affair is truly risky; hardly a race of this type has been held without one or more sailors being lost overboard from one or another competing craft.

Watch for this race this summer. It will give you some real thrills.

The male may be superior, but he can't drop three ounces of fabric over his head and call himself dressed.—Fostoria, O., Times.

It isn't fair to say that doctors who are seen carrying surgical cases look perfectly "killing."—Zanesville, O., Signal.

The RAMBLER

WASHINGTON

TODAY I've Been Wondering
With the coming Of George's birthday
Just how much
The father of our Country really means
To the boys of today,
And I remember
It wasn't so Many years ago that I was a kid
Back in the old School Worshipping Washington
And even taking Part in a mimic
Boston Tea Party—
Living again
Those tumultuous Revolutionary days,
That Washington
So safely engineered Us through—
And there's the Tradition of The cherry tree
And somehow
I can't help but Esteem it
Just as highly
Just as fervently,
Just as seriously
As I do the legend
Of Santa Claus
Or that any patron
Saint exists,
For what would living be Without George's Cherry tree and Things like that—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Be a boy for a day,
Be a boy every day,
If you'd be a
King
Though your hair's
Turning grey;
Believe in cherry
Trees,
Revere Washington,
Go on thinking your Childhood thoughts,
For Youth is sweet,
Brother, and Youth is Real.

We often believe we'd like to feel as beautiful as some of the words the esteemed society editor uses and then again we have our moments when we'd like to be as brutal and as severe as the sporting editor.

They keep on talking about our policy in Nicaragua and we'd like to find out what it really is, if any.

We often wonder what would happen if as many people tried to run everyone's business the way they try to guide a newspaper.

He came staggering in at 4 o'clock in the morning, broke a bottle on the floor and flicked his cigaret ashes on the new carpet, but his wife simply smiled, put her arm around him, and said: "Come on, dear, I'll make you a cup of coffee before you go to bed, and then be sure and sleep until noon." (You're right, me, the writer of the above is just a darned good, imaginative liar!)

SOMETHING TO DO!

Each time one legislature meets,
It passes grand new laws,
And then next day we break them, well—
We break them—just because!

We often wonder what Mrs. Bob Ryder thinks of Mr. Bob Ryder's written observations of things feminine.

Having discovered that Miss Gertrude Spank is a teacher in the public school of Boseman, Mo., Johnny Spencer, of Macon, not content to rest on his laurels, now broadcasts that he has found Miss Dolores Slappey teaches in the school in Moultrie, Ga.—Sam Hill's column, Cincinnati Enquirer.

How about Professor Biffem, who hails from somewhere in Kaintuck?

Nowadays, with the modern divorce evil, even a tin wedding anniversary seems wonderful.

Some people say that after you die your soul goes into a cat or a dog or some sort of an animal, and we'd hate to be an animal and have to put up with the soul of a saxophone player or a spinach eater.

We often feel like we'd like to know a feminine girl.

When a Man Loves

By ALLIE LOWE MILES

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picture production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescout, beautiful orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravoire. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoire. She rejoins Fabien, and they live so extravagantly that Fabien is forced to capitalize a game of cards. The King plays Fabien at cards for Manon, accuses him of cheating, gives Manon to Ravoire, who carries her to a secret room which Fabien tries to find, while fiercely fighting.

Fabien would not have been able to get into the room if the great metal bolt had been in place. Fortunately for him the precaution had not been taken, but he lost no time in shooting it into the secure wall socket. The men outside had begun pounding on the bolted door when Fabien turned his back to it and surveyed the room. It was empty! Three closed doors mocked him from the other walls. Was he too late? What had become of Manon?

When Manon found herself forced into the small room at the head of the stairs, she locked the bolt, just as Fabien did later. The room was empty and while she was debating which of the three other doors to try, one of them opened and King Louis approached her with amusement and pleasant anticipation.

"The Chevalier was not a graceful loser, Mademoiselle," he said.

And what we mean to say
Is,
Be a boy for a day,
Be a boy every day,
If you'd be a
King
Though your hair's
Turning grey;
Believe in cherry
Trees,
Revere Washington,
Go on thinking your Childhood thoughts,
For Youth is sweet,
Brother, and Youth is Real.

"She is my property—I give her to you."
suavely, "But you—you are honest enough to deliver yourself in person!"
"Oh!" It was a startled cry of apprehension as she drew back in fear.
"Come here!" Commanded the King, moistening his small full lips.
Manon looked him squarely in the eyes—but did not move.
"I said, 'come here!'" Annoyed at not being obeyed, Louis spoke harshly.
"Your Majesty!" It was a cry for pity, but Louis mistook it for embarrassment.
Behind the King the door opened again and Manon saw the Comte quietly enter the room and stand with his back to the door. A feeling of utter helplessness surged over her as the King advanced and attempted to caress her. Her eyes blazed with anger as she struck down his arms and ran to the other side of the room. Pounding on the bolted door she called wildly for Fabien.

The King was infuriated. Never before in his licentious career had his amorous advances met with such indifference and repulsion.
"Monsieur Le Comte," he said with an angry gesture. "It seems this wench still prefers her card-kneeling lover to, shall we say, a friendship with her King."
"Your Majesty's pardon," replied de Ravoire, "But Sir, what can you expect? The woman had become so notorious that even I was forced to discard her!"
At this the King turned to look at Manon with a scowl on his face that indicated a mixture of rage and disappointment.

"Your dignity will suffer as it is," continued the Comte, "For she will doubtless make of this a joke to be repeated at the gaming tables of Paris."
The King continued to scowl. Already he had made himself ridiculous, and ridicule of all things he could not stand or afford. After all, why was one woman any better, or any worse than another? With a shrug he turned and left the room, saying as he approached the door, "She is my property—I give her to you. Perhaps from past experience you can find a way to make her more agreeable to your wishes."
As the door closed behind the

When the King's soldiers carried Manon through the doorway she knew that Andre was fighting to save her, but she did not know that he had ceased that struggle. She was dimly aware of the Comte hovering in the background, giving directions to the men, and her mind wandered back to Fabien. With a sob that choked her, the very soul who ceased her struggle, and with a whispered prayer for the safety of her lover let herself be borne away.

Manon had no idea where she was being taken.
Fate had again separated her from Fabien and put her in the Comte's power. She was crazed with anxiety to know what had happened to her lover and if they would ever see each other again.

When Fabien was the seclusion of the little room at the head of the stairs, and locked out the angry crowd, he was frantic to find Manon. The fact that she was not there spurred him into action without further delay. Of the three doors that stared blindly from the surrounding walls he chose the one to the left. He hoped it would lead into the same room he had seen Lescout enter from the corridor a short while before.

Fortunately the door was unlocked. Bursting into the room, Fabien saw Lescout leaning over a chair, but his thoughts were so concerned with Manon that he did not notice the deadly stream of blood that slowly trickled down the back of Lescout's satin coat.

"Where is Manon?" demanded Fabien.
"In there—a moment ago," gasped Lescout with difficulty, waving toward a door opposite the one Fabien had entered.

"My God, man you are wounded—in the back!" Fabien was all compassion and put his arms about Lescout's drooping shoulders.

"Water Curtains" For Safety In Theaters

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 15.—(UP)—"Water Curtains" as means of fire protection will be installed in Stockholm's legitimate theaters. These sprinklers will emanate from pipes extending clear across the stages above the proscenium arches.

The recent total demolition by fire of two of Stockholm's best known playhouses, the Svenska Teatern, have spurred the authorities to make the remaining theaters perfectly fireproof.

Among other innovations which are now being installed are new Teatern and the Oestermalm automatic alarm apparatus directly connected with the Fire Department. The apertures in the ceiling for letting out smoke in case of fire will be materially increased in size, while the shutters which close these openings will be regulated automatically.

Defining History

In an objective sense history has been defined as "all we know about everything man has ever done, or thought, or hoped, or felt." Subjectively speaking, it may be regarded as a record of all that has occurred within the realm of human consciousness.

Plain Facts About Investments SO-CALLED BROKERS' LOANS

By W. S. COUSINS, International News Service Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—(INS)—

The expansion of a billion dollars in the so-called brokers' loans in the banking institutions of the country has raised two important questions, the first of which concerns the danger of a wide inflation of stock prices and the second the function of the banking institutions in industrial and speculative activities.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—(INS)—The expansion of a billion dollars in the so-called brokers' loans in the banking institutions of the country has raised two important questions, the first of which concerns the danger of a wide inflation of stock prices and the second the function of the banking institutions in industrial and speculative activities.

Financing of new enterprises

We often hear of girls who are boy crazy. They all are, but I think the gods a good many of them do not show it. And all the men are girl crazy. There is no remedy; the only thing is to hide our craziness as much as possible. Speaking for myself, if the Bible were a law book, I could be taken to jail a hundred times a day for covetousness no one catches me at.

One of the best of our sayings is that virtue is its own reward. The young man who declines an invitation to engage in a night of drinking and rowdiness must find a particular pleasure in the jingle in his pocket of money he didn't spend.

I am a bore in teaching the importance of good conduct, but good conduct is as important as I say it is. Don't forget that. You may sneer, but the goblins always get you when you don't watch out.

I promise today to do better tomorrow, but will not, judging from my past record. Still, I think it best to promise; possibly in the course of a long time, I shall do a little better tomorrow.

Nearly every man thing has been said about me, except that I am fat. But I get little credit for maintaining the weight fitting my years; people frequently say: "How thin you are!"

I know of only two things reformers have not attacked: The prices charged by undertakers and surgeons.

There is no rule more invariable than that we are paid for our suspicions by finding what we suspected.—Thoreau.

The most magnificent and popular human expression is: "I rebel!" The most enduring philosophy is: "I submit!"

I have never attracted the favor of any man to the extent that he was willing to divide his money with me. But everyone I meet is willing to divide his valuable ideas with me.

The first thing I do every morning is to begin suffering for my bad conduct of yesterday.

A great man," say the Chinese, "will not see a little man's faults." . . . A foolish proverb. It is the great men who see the faults of little men and beg them to behave better.

"When my wife has a cold," an old fellow writes, "she treats me as though I had given it to her."

and of the necessary expansion of existing industrial mechanism is a legitimate occupation of the banking institutions, and its reflex action is of the greatest benefit to the country as a whole. The same can be said for the actual investment purchasing of stocks and bonds, which each year consumes from five to seven billions of dollars of individual and institutional surplus. But not so plain a case can be made for marginal speculation in stocks, even if we admit that a certain volume of stock speculation is essential to the growth and development of the country and its industrial and commercial institutions.

An academic discussion as to just how much speculative borrowing the banking system of the country can support is somewhat wide of the market at this time, when the trend in industry and industrial profits is moderately downward. It is the function of the banking institutions to finance the distribution of stocks and bonds to individual and institutional buyers as much as it is to finance industrial expansion. The collateral they accept is the most liquid in the world, of that there can be no doubt, except where a sudden collapse in the security market wipes out the dross of artificial inflation of prices of "speculative babies" that were unworthy of such distinction in the first place.

Since the middle of 1927, for example, two of the outstanding speculative favorites in the New York market have been the stock of a Canadian metal mining company whose important new discoveries are not expected to enter into actual production for a period of three years, and the stock of a new industrial corporation which in the last year or two has just about earned the dividend on its preferred stock.

The earnings in the first nine months of the latter company amounted to about $3 a share and for the whole year, 1927, may reach the total sum of $5 a share. On any rational basis of valuation these stocks would be worth little more than half of what they are now commanding in the listed market, but the bearish traders who have attempted to demonstrate the correctness of this calculation now find themselves facing heavy losses, with every prospect of paying still higher prices.

THE GREAT WAR TEN YEARS AGO TODAY

(U. P.)—

FEB. 15, 1918

Eight British ships are sunk by a submarine in the Straits of Dover; it escapes.

Continued efforts of Chairman Hurley of the U. S. Shipping Board and Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor fail to settle the strike of shipyard workers.

Germany decides to renew war against Russia.

to extricate themselves from the trap into which they have unwittingly walked.

In his report to the stockholders of the Chase National Bank this week, Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the board and one of the most brilliant of American banking leaders, calls attention to the nation-wide orgy of speculation and the effects thereof on the loaning operations of the banks of the country.

Taking the figures of nearly seven hundred reporting member banks of the Federal Reserve System, said Mr. Wiggin, we find that between Nov. 30, 1926, and Dec. 1, 1927, commercial loans showed a decline of nearly $4,000,000, where as the investments in securities showed an increase of over $800,000,000 and the loans on stock and bond collateral increased $842,000,000.

Leaving bankers and business men to draw their own conclusions, Mr. Wiggin concludes with this significant statement: This condition should receive thoughtful consideration. If it receives the amount of thoughtful consideration to which it is entitled, there is little likelihood of an expansion in speculative borrowings to much beyond the current figures.

This is not intended as a criticism of the expansion of brokers' borrowings as such, but rather to point the wide disparity between commercial and speculative financing. A certain looseness in banking funds is essential to the continuance of a bull market in stocks, but of much greater importance in industrial corporation earnings and dividend distribution. In the long run, a bull market built up on easy money will topple over of its own weight, while a legitimate advance built on expanding operations and earnings withstands the rigors of speculative attacks.

Prince Humbert's Union With Belgian Princes Wins General Approval

BRUSSELS, Feb. 14.—(INS)—The ghost of Napoleon I will undoubtedly return to place his seal upon the union of the royal prince of Italy with the young Princess Marie-Jose of Belgium, if the much-talked-of marriage is consummated next spring.

Princess Clementine, daughter of old King Leopold II, is the aunt of the present King Albert and grand aunt of his daughter, Princess Marie. She is the widow of Prince Victor Napoleon, son of Prince Jerome Bonaparte and Princess Clothilde, sister of King Humbert of Italy. Thus, she is also the grand-aunt of the prince of Italy.

The prince belongs to the house of Savoie, son of Princess Helene reigned. Her great-grandmother was a Princess of Savoie and his great-grandmother, the wife of Victor Emmanuel I, Princess of Austria.

The Queen of the Belgians, mother of Marie-Jose, is a Bavarian Duchess of the branch which never occupied the throne. Her grandmother was a Hohenzollern, also of a branch which never reigned. Her great-grandmother was Princess Louise d'Orleans, daughter of King Louis Philippe, of France.

STOCK GROUPS OF OHIO WILL HAVE MEETING

Farmers From More Than 60 Counties to Attend Gatherings in Columbus.

Farmers from more than 60 Ohio counties are expected to attend the annual meeting of the Ohio Livestock Cooperative Association and the Ohio Wool Growers Cooperative Association which will be held in Columbus Feb. 21 and 22. A large number will represent Pickaway county.

A feature of the two day meeting will be a welcome from J. F. Walker, one of the organizers and for several years field secretary of the wool growers association. Mr. Walker recently returned from an eight month trip of inspection of sheep and wool growing sections of Australia, South Africa and Europe, as agent for the United States Department of Agriculture.

Delegates are Named
Local meetings of wool growers in all sections have been held and delegates selected for the meeting. The association has the largest membership of any wool co-operative in the country, and has been operating ten years.

Livestock producers who gather for their annual meeting will hear reports of the most successful year in the history of co-operative livestock marketing in Ohio, according to F. G. Ketter, secretary of the association. In addition to reports and talks of Ohio livestock leaders, C. B. Denman of Missouri, president of the National Livestock Producers Association will be on the program.

Widely Known Speakers
The annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Producers Co-operative Commission Association, a terminal marketing unit of the livestock co-operatives will be held on the evening of Feb. 21. C. A. Stewart, secretary of the National Livestock Producers Association and E. M. Underwood, market supervisor for the packer and stockyards administration of the Government will be the speakers.

Livestock and wool men will hold a joint banquet on Feb. 22, with a program of entertainment only.

SEEKS MEMBERS ON MONTH'S ODD DAY

Thousands of Ohio farmers will use their extra day in February in urging other farmers to join the Farm Bureau, according to President E. C. Rector, of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau. A state-wide "Give a Day Campaign," was inaugurated when farmers from all parts of the state gathered at the recent annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation in Columbus.

"More than 4000 people, including officials of state and county farm bureaus and those connected with affiliated groups, have been mailed pledge cards for the campaign," reports President L. B. Palmer of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. "Several hundred of these have already been signed and returned. While February 29 is the extra day we are asking volunteers to give any day of their own choosing during February."

Reports of members of the farm bureau in Ohio show a slight increase for 1927, and delegates at the recent state meeting felt that the present membership could be increased materially.

English Town Holds Court For 19 Years Without a Criminal

LONDON, Feb. 15 —(INS)—Thetford, an ancient borough in Norfolk with a population of 5,000 claims to be the most law-abiding spot in the world.

There are figures to support its proud contention. For the nineteenth time in succession, the quarter-session court has just been held with no one to be summoned before the bar of justice charged with a crime.

Although there are 27 saloons in the borough, there has not been a drunkenness charge entered on the docket for many years. "We are proud of our record," Mayor T. R. Doran said, "Thetford is a comparatively small borough, but I think the absence of crime is unequalled anywhere." Mayor Doran could not advance any particular reason for Thetford's spotless reputation, but expressed the belief that lawlessness may have been flogged out by the citizenry in the early days of the borough's existence, during the days of Queen Elizabeth.

Chinese Steamer Crew Killed When Vessel Is Boarded by Pirates

HONG KONG, Feb. 14—(INS)—Hugh Conway, the British mate of the Chinese steamer Sannamhoi and two Indian guards were killed when pirates recently boarded the steamer near here.

The Sannamhoi crew resisted the attack, and a fierce fight is reported to have taken place. The pirates fled on the approach of a British gunboat. It is believed the appearance of the gunboat saved the entire crew from massacre.

The pirate band is thought to have included members of the Bias Bay gangs which have been responsible for a number of piratical attacks on shipping recently. One of the most recent outrages of the Bias Bay pirates was the capture of the British Captain Lator of the British steamer Slangtan.

Deplores Loss Of Women's Femininity

PARIS, Feb. 15 —(UP)—"The twilight of woman is at hand," said Paul Valery, poet and "Immortal," when asked what he thought about an organization just started here "to fight against the growing masculinity of women." He added that "an unsexed caricature of man is taking the place of woman."

M. Valery declared it was the duty of all good Frenchmen to take part in the campaign to free women from "an invasion of masculinity." He said the aim of woman should be to participate fully in social and political life of the community without losing her femininity.

FAILURE TO AGREE ON INTERNATIONAL LAW LOOMS AT CUBAN CONFERENCE

DELEGATES SHY AT PROPOSALS TO AVOID WAR

United States and Argentine Again Split On Issue Of Armed Vessels.

HAVANA, Feb. 15 — (INS) — With the final session of the full Pan-American conference set for next Monday, the most important commission of the gathering—that on International law—was ready today to attempt to arrive at some decision on the most important issues of its program.

Unless some decision is arrived at quickly, the commission stands to face with the prospect of recording a signal failure to achieve its aims.

Project Side-Track

The most comprehensive project before the commission came into the debate last night and, after two hours of futile discussion the proposition designed to prevent war in the western world by providing an elaborate machinery for the "Pacific Settlement of International Conflicts," was hurriedly referred to a sub-committee for study and action.

The project's great mass of details deals with good offices and mediation, commissions of investigation, conciliation, friendly composition and arbitration. All this is intended to prevent war between the American republics.

The substance of the project has been before the commission for four weeks, but it was not until last night that it came up for discussion.

Argentine Opposes

There is also the prospect that the issue of rights and duties of nations, involving the delicate question of Intervention, will be lost in the rush of the final sessions. Next Thursday has been set as the date of a meeting of the commission in an effort to speed through some sort of understanding acceptable to all.

The United States and Argentina, already at odds on economic barriers and intervention, are at odds on the question of armed merchant ships in time of war. Argentina asked that such ships be considered war vessels. The United States, Uruguay, Panama, and Cuba voted against this.

U. S. Tobacco Experts Ask Bigger Salaries Of Egyptian Government

CAIRO, Feb. 15 — (INS) — The charms of Egypt with all its Eastern lure is not sufficient to attract hard headed American experts in tobacco-growing whom the Egyptian government wanted to invite.

American experts seem to feel that a year in America is worth two in Egypt, asking Egypt to pay them just double the salary while they earn in America.

The Egyptian Minister in Washington has informed his government that two experts whom he consulted have asked $10,000 a year each, although their salaries in America were between $5,000 and $5,600.

LOVERS UNITED IN SUICIDE PACT?

Inset (circle) shows Bella Alexander, 19-year-old senior at William Penn High School, Philadelphia, who was found fatally shot in a lonely road in Haverford, Pa., with her fiancé, Louis Shapiro, also slain. They had previously tried to elope, but failed. General photo shows where bodies were discovered.

Poem On Masonry By Franklin Is Found In Old Journal Of Society

The following poem appeared in the Masonic Journal some 60 years ago. It was handed to The Herald by Wilson H. Moyst, who has had it in his possession ever since. Members of the Masonic order will readily recognize the significant wording of the different stanzas.

ARE YOU ONE OF THE BAND?

The verses below were the words of Benjamin Franklin. He knocked at a door of a lodge in London, and was asked by the master, "Who are you?" He replied in the following words:

I am one of the band
Who will faithfully stand—
In the bonds of affection and love;
I have knocked at the door,
Once wretched and poor,
And there for admission I strove.

By the help of a friend,
Who assistance did lend,
I succeeded an entrance to gain,
Was received in the "West,"
By command from the "East,"
But not without feeling some pain.

Here my conscience was taught,
With a moral quite fraught
With sentiment holy and true;
Then onward I traveled
To see it unraveled
What Hiram intended to do.

Very soon in the "East"
I made known my request,
And "Light" by command did attend;
When, lo, I perceived,
In due form, revealed,
A Master, and Brother, and Friend.

Thus far I have stated
And simply related,
What happened when I was made free,
But I've "passed" since then,
And was "raised" up again
To a sublime and ancient degree.

Then onward I marched,
That I might be "Arch'd"
And find out those treasures long lost,
When behold a bright flame
From the midst of which came
A voice, which my ears did accost.

Through the "veils" I then went,
And succeeded at length,
The "Sanctum Sanctorum" to find,
But the "Signet" I gained

And quickly obtained
Employment which suited my mind.

In the depth I then wrought
And most carefully sought
For treasures so long hidden there,
And by labor and toil
I discovered rich spoil,
Which are kept by the Craft with due care.

Having thus far arrived,
I further contrived,
Among valiant Knights to appear
And as Pilgrim and Knight
I stood ready to fight—
Nor Saracen foe did I fear.

For the widow distressed
There's a chord in my breast;
For the helpless and orphan I feel.
And my sword I could draw
To maintain the new law,
Which the duty of Masons reveal.

Thus I have received
(Yet wisely concealed),
What the "Free and Accepted"
well know,
I am one of the "Band,"
Who will faithfully stand,
As a brother wherever I go.

War Minister Painleve Is Late For Wedding

PARIS, Feb. 15 — (INS) — At the recent marriage of the daughter of former Minister of Finances M. Francois-Marshall, Minister of War, Painleve, came in very late—as is his usual custom.

"Where is the bride?" he inquired breathlessly of the door-keeper.
"In the sacristy" was the reply, and he hurried toward the door which was shut. The sacristan would not let him in.
"But, I'm the Minister of War!" he insisted.
"But that's no reason why you should enter. Nobody can come in here now."

So Painleve quietly went away, thinking that there were other than military guards in Paris.

Prehistoric Mound
Moundsville, W. Va., owes its name to Grave Creek mound, 79 feet high and 820 feet in circumference, the largest prehistoric monument of its kind in America. Many objects of interest including a stone bearing inscriptions which have never been deciphered were found in partial explorations of the mound's interior.

ADVISE USE OF "ACCRUAL BASIS"

Gives Farmer Advantage in Filling Out Tax Returns On Held-Over Crops.

Farmers, in computing income tax returns, may find it to their advantage to use the "accrual basis" or inventory system, it is pointed out by C. R. Arnold of the department of rural economics of the Ohio State University. Farmers have the choice of reporting on a basis of cash receipts and expenditures, or upon a basis of the inventory taken at the end of each year.

For the inventory or "accrual basis" the gross profits are obtained by adding to the inventory value of livestock and products on hand, at the end of the year, the amount received from the sale of stock and products and other miscellaneous items such as hire of teams, machinery and the like during the year, and deducting from this sum the inventory value of stock and products on hand at the beginning of the year plus the cost of stock and produce produced during the year, whether paid or not.

Upon the basis of records of cash receipts and disbursements, the farmer may in a given year run his receipts very high by holding over a crop or produce or livestock and selling that commodity as well as the crop of the current year. This will be avoided by the accrual basis method, which shows the steady growth from year to year if a man will keep annual inventories with his record of receipts and expenses.

Would Aid Farmers Buy Reclaimed Land

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15 — (U P)—Establishment of a credit fund to aid farmers settling on reclaimed lands is proposed by the Interior Department in announcing a reclamation settlement conference to meet in Washington tomorrow and Wednesday.

Only seven per cent of those desiring to settle on land reclaimed by the department have $5,000 or more, which is considered necessary to equip properly a farm without borrowing money, the statement points out, and urges the need of either federal or state credit funds to help these persons. Among the subjects to be considered at the conference is the advisability of asking Congress for legislation to promote settlement on irrigated land and facilitate farm development.

Gives Free Auto Rides With Sermon

STEYNING, Eng., Feb. 15 — (U P)—The Pastor of a scattered parish near here has discovered the way to secure a good attendance at his church on Sundays.

Each Sunday before the service the preacher takes his car to regular calling places some distance from the church. Whether the day is stormy or fair, he never fails to gather enough people to fill his church.

Everyone who attends gets a free ride after the service to the point where he was picked up.

IF FARM IS FRYING PAN, CITY IS FIRE

Boys Who Leave Agriculture Don't Better Condition By Making Change.

"Formal education" to the extent of a year or more of high school education, seems to encourage the farm boy or girl to desert farming and the farm, for some other occupation. But when he does leave the farm, the chance is better than 50-50 that he will wind up as an unskilled laborer in a city, which position, insofar as social prestige is concerned, is decidedly less attractive than that of the operator of a farm.

These conclusions are based upon a closely conducted survey of two typical northwestern Ohio townships, made by C. E. Lively and P. G. Beck, of the Rural Sociology Department of the Ohio State University.

The two sociologists discovered that a half more of the children who had started for themselves after a year or more of high school, went away from the farms, as compared with the children who never obtained high school training. Of those who left the farm for other jobs 75 per cent became laborers, and 60 per cent, unskilled laborers. Of those who stayed on the farm, 83 per cent became farm operators, either owning or renting their farms, but at any rate controlling their own activities. Only 17 of them became laborers on other men's farms.

"So far as social status is concerned, it would seem therefore, that more than half of those who left the farm have not bettered their condition," says the report of the sociologists.

Mexico Hurries Work On Irrigation Plans

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 14 — (UP)—Work on the irrigation projects started by the Calles administration will be pushed so as to be as nearly complete as possible by the time President Calles leaves office. President Calles already has directed the expenditure of $6,000,000 on irrigation works.

The total amount of land reclaimed through the efforts of the Calles administration is placed at 750,000 acres, of which 450,000 were irrigated during the last year.

One hundred and twenty thousand families have received land grants, many on the newly reclaimed lands. Cooperative rural banks have loaned $250,000 for the development of farms.

KILL CORN BORER BY CLEAN-UP NOW

Dry, Bright Winter Weather Fine For Breaking Stalks And Burning Trash.

Life for the corn-borer may be made a little more uncomfortable during February, if the standing corn-stalks which he is inhabiting are broken down and burned during this month. "Farm Practices Under Corn Borer Conditions," a recent bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, makes this suggestion. C. R. Arnold of the rural economics department of the Ohio State university, is one of the authors contributing to this bulletin.

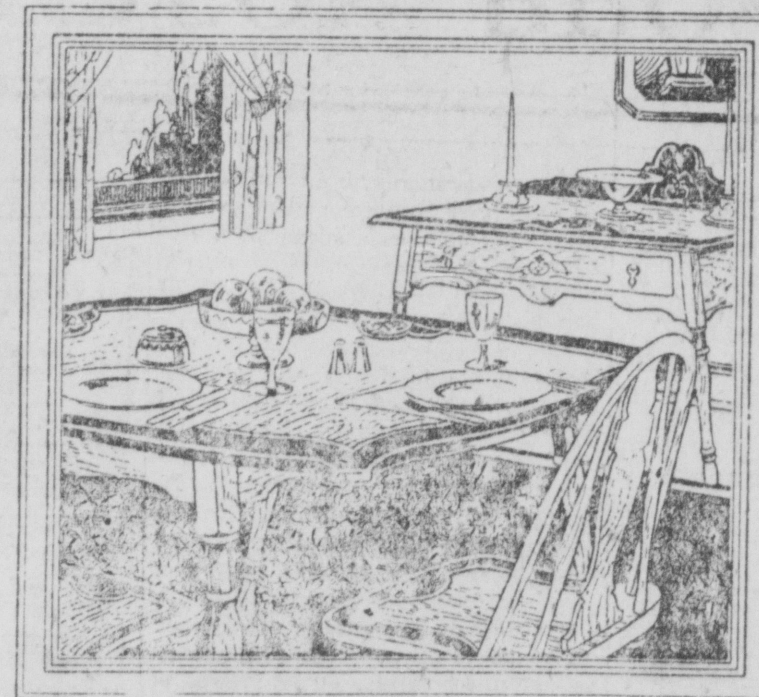

"This time of year when corn-borer clean-up operations may be performed to best advantage is almost as important to farmers as is the amount of this work to be done," says the bulletin. "As much of this extra work as is possible should be done before the rush of spring work begins."

"In January or February the standing stalks may be broken off with a T-rail or pole, if there is a period when the ground is frozen and free from snow. If the stalks are frozen dry they may also be raked and burned at that time. This will reduce considerably the amount of clean-up work to be done later in the spring. Any bright, dry weather in winter should be utilized in destroying cobs and trash, especially corn-stalks, around the barns and feed lots."

Trapped by Catnip

It is not the purring house cat alone that is irresistibly attracted by the smell of that strange drug, catnip. The spell runs through the entire family, according to the American Druggist, which reports that a compound of artificial catnip is being used effectively to trap the bobcats and mountain lions that infest the far-western mountain regions.

Indiana Fugitives Believed To Be Held In Ohio

ASSERT BOYS ESCAPED FROM THEIR GUARDS

Authorities at St. Clairsville Capture Youths After Gun Battle.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Feb. 15, (INS)—Two youths, thought to be John Burns and Samuel Baxter, who escaped last week from deputy sheriffs while being taken to the Indiana reformatory at Pendleton, are being held in the county jail here today, while Indiana authorities are enroute to view them.
The boys registered as Frank Fornes and Albert Jennings, Youngstown, O. The two deputy sheriffs who had Burns and Baxter in custody have not been seen since they left Lafayette with their prisoners.

Arrested After Chase.
The youths were arrested late yesterday by sheriff's deputies after they are said to have driven away from a filling station without paying for their fuel. After a short chase with the deputies in pursuit the boys abandoned their auto and made for an adjacent wood. In the wood, the deputies say, the boys ordered them to halt and fired upon them. The sheriff's men returned the fire, bullets striking one of the boys in the leg.

The auto which the boys are said to have abandoned here, Sheriff Hardesty reported, contained a road map on which routes were traced from Decatur, Ill., to Col-feville, Kans., Memphis and Cincinnati. At noon yesterday an auto was reported stolen at Columbus, and it was this auto the boys drove to St. Clairsville, authorities say. An auto stolen earlier yesterday at Springfield, O., was abandoned in Columbus.

GUSMAN AGAIN NAMED TO AID CAMP PROJECT

Circleville Resident to Receive Local Applications For Summer Training.

C. S. Gusman, of 423 South
Scioto street, has received formal notification from Edward M. Williams, State Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War for Ohio, of his re-appointment as chairman for Pickaway county in charge of enrollment of eligible young men for this year's Citizens' Military Training Camps.

Campaign plans which Chairman Gusman received from the State Aide, provide for county quotas being allotted to each county in the Fifth Corps Area which comprise the states of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia. Chairman Gusman will appoint a group of local chairmen throughout the county to assist him in enrolling young men between the ages of 17 and 24 who are of good moral character, the average intelligence and physically fit.

With hundreds of camps held this year throughout the entire land, government officials expect the response from young men to more than exceed the number of vacancies allotted. Only those who complete the necessary requirements early, Chairman Gus-man explained, are assured of a place at camp.

Camps this year will again be held at Fort Thomas and Camp Knock, Ky., July 2-31 and at Fort Benjamin, near Indianapolis, June 20-July 19. All expenses incident to this training, including food, uniforms, medical and dental care and even railroad fare to and from camp, are borne by the government.

TRIAL SLOWED UP BY CLASHES OF ATTORNEYS

Slow Progress Being Made in Hearing of James Flint, Charged With Murder.

Progress in the trial of James Flint, alias Walter Brown, colored, charged with first degree murder in connection with the slaying of John Henry Hill, also colored, on Nov. 14, 1927, is making only slight progress due to the arguments of the opposing counsel over the admissibility of testimony concerning the conversations which took place the night of the killing in the kitchen of the Charles Byrd home.

This controversy temporarily halted the trial Tuesday afternoon while the court stenographer waited over her notes to see if the state, in the examination of its witnesses, had asked anything concerning what was said in the Byrd kitchen.

This procedure held up the trial until 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon when the court announced that decision on the arguments would be reserved and Ed Lowe, who precipitated the issue, was asked to retire and John Morgan was called to the stand.

Morgan testified that Earl Mallett, one of the state's reputed eye witnesses to the slaying and who had accused Flint, was intoxicated the day of the shooting and that Mallett had been drinking canned heat. He also said that Mallett was intoxicated when he reported the shooting of Hill.

A fiery argument between the opposing lawyers started over the admission of evidence about a gun at a dance over at Washington C. H. The state was attempting to tie up the gun with Flint and Morgan, a taxi driver, said that the crowd he took to the dance was not sober nor drunk, but just happy.

Wednesday morning Morgan was recalled to the stand and testified that Oscar Galloway, colored, was at the scene of the murder with four or five other men when he went there in company with Sheriff Davis. Morgan, on cross examination, admitted that

Thomas Jeffries Declares Preparedness and Aggressiveness Needed Here.

New industrial possibilities of Circleville were outlined to members of the Chamber of Commerce at their regular weekly dinner meeting in the Masonic Temple Tuesday night when Thomas Jeffries suggested that the bed of the old canal passing through the city be utilized for factory sites.

The recommendation of Mr.
Jeffries was made when he was asked to answer the query, "How can a Chamber of Commerce obtain money to get new industries when the opportunities present themselves?"

The money question was dismissed by Mr. Jeffries with the suggestion that it could be obtained by strict economy and ceasing to make small donations to various causes for which the Chamber of Commerce received no credit and which soon total a large amount.

Acquire Canal Beds
Jeffries advanced the idea that in all parts of Ohio municipalities have been acquiring from the state the beds of abandoned canals which formerly passed through their communities. These canal lands have been acquired for factory, park and boulevard projects, he said.

Mr. Jeffries asserted he saw no reason why the canal bed through Circleville could not be acquired similarly from the state. Obtaining this land at a small cost, he pointed out, large one story factory buildings could be erected which would undoubtedly attract industry to this city.

Attention of the Chamber of Commerce members was called by Mr. Jeffries to the fact that the Mid-West mills are now located in Circleville because many years ago buildings were available for occupancy by the old Strawboard company. This, he said, was also true of the Winor cannery plant and the Goeller Broom company, before fire destroyed the plant of the latter company.

Urges Aggression
Aggression, instead of watchful waiting, was urged by Mr. Jeffries as the best means of bringing new industries to Circleville. He advised that the city prepare itself to receive new enterprises and collect the data on its advantages so that when the opportunity is presented, facts and selling talk will clinch the proposition.

Ed Sensenbrenner and Frank Barnhill were in charge of Tuesday night's gathering and they had prepared questions which pertained to the civic problems of Circleville.

The question of the Chamber of Commerce replacing waste paper receptacles on the streets in the business section revealed that the present cans are worn out. Bob Brehmer was named by T. O. Gilliland, chairman of the meeting, to investigate the cost of the containers.

Sad Tale Told Of Widow's Charm In Old Newspaper

A widow had the same fatal attractions a century ago as are credited to some of the bereaved women of today, according to an advertisement appearing in The Aurora, a newspaper published at Philadelphia, Pa., in December, 1804. A copy of this old paper was brought to The Herald office by James S. Swearingen, of Jackson township, who found it among papers which have been in the possession of the family for more than 100 years.

This is the advertisement and its sad tale:
"The subscriber having for some time past suffered extremely by a fatal connection and acquaintance with a certain Mary Asboth, of the Northern Liberties, (a suburb of Philadelphia), widow, hereby cautions and forewarns all persons

FATAL CRASH TAKES PLACE AT FRANKLIN

Gordon Anderson, Employed
By Sturm and Dillard, Is Run Down Along Road.

Gordon Anderson, 38, of Circleville, was injured fatally when run down by a hat-skip motorist about 6:30 p. m., Tuesday when he was walking along the Circleville-Chillicothe road near Franklin station.

He was picked up by a passing motorist and taken to the City hospital at Chillicothe where he died at 8:45 p. m. He had sustained a broken arm and leg, fractured skull and internal injuries.

Anderson, the son of the late Harry Anderson, of Pickaway county, was employed until 10:30
a. m., Tuesday by the firm of Sturm and Dillard for whom he had worked for a number of months.

After being paid off he went to Franklin station to visit Miss Bertha Rueb, residing near there.
He left the Rueb home about 6 o'clock for the station to catch a traction car into Chillicothe.

He was unconscious when picked up and he was identified only by a picture of Miss Rueb, on which her name was inscribed and which he had in his pocket. Miss Rueb identified the accident victim.

It is said Anderson worked in Circleville a number of years for the B. and O. railroad, but later went to Seattle, Wash., returning here to work for Sturm and Dil-lard company in the Chesapeake and Ohio construction.

Both parents are said to be dead and a brother was killed in the World war. The dead man is a cousin of former Sheriff William Anderson, of Pike county.
Funeral services have not been arranged.

Wins $8,000,000 Judgement In Damage Suit; Now Wants It Tripled

DUKE ESTATE IS DEFENDANT IN LAW SUIT

Discoverer of Valuable Mineral Deposits in Canada Makes Conspiracy Charges.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 15.—(INS)—George D. Haskell, who was awarded $8,000,000 by a jury last night in his $45,000,000 suit against the estate of the late James B. Duke, now wants the award tripled. Homer F. Cummings, attorney for Haskell, announced today he would ask United States Judge William N. Runyon tomorrow to have the award increased to $24,000,000.

Haskell will seek the additional award under the section of the Sherman Act, which allows triple damages to a man injured by a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Haskell is the head of the Bausch Machine and Tool Company. After discovering bauxite and aluminum deposits in Canada, he arranged to start operations with waterpower controlled by James B. Duke along the Saguenay river in Quebec. When he had arranged a partnership with the tobacco man, Haskell charged, Duke went over to the Aluminum Company of America, and Haskell was left in the lurch. Duke and the Aluminum Company developed the project.

It was alleged that Duke received $25,000,000 worth of stock in the aluminum company.

The $8,000,000 verdict is said to be the largest ever returned in favor of a single individual in a damage suit. Counsel for the defendant plan to take an appeal from the verdict.

Captain Donnellan Starts From Cuba on New Leg of His Good Will Tour.

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 15.—(UP)—Captain Joseph Donnellan, who is on a good will tour to South America, took off from Columbia flying field at 3:05 a. m., today for the British Honduras.

Only a few people were at the flying field to watch his get-away, which was perfectly made. He circled the field, waved that everything was all right, circled over the main part of Havana twice and then was away on his flight.

Captain Donnellan's flight today will be over a 650 mile course, most of which is over water.

He planned to go by way of Cape San Antonio, the Island of Mugiers off Yucatan, Carzamel Isles, Point Herrero, Ambergis Reef and finally to land at Belize.

He is flying in a single seated Waco plane and carried no radio equipment.

The flight the St. Joseph, Mich., flyer is undertaking will be about 13,000 miles when he successfully returns to the United States. He hoped to be able to establish a commercial route through most of South America, hooking up the Northern and Southern continents.

FARM DATA WILL BE TOPIC FOR SCHOOLS

Instruction Will Be Given By Lewis in Keeping Agricultural Accounts.

Two schools for the instruction of farmers in the keeping of farm accounts will be conducted in Pickaway county by H. S. Lewis, county agent in cooperation with the agricultural extension service of Ohio State university.

The first school will be held at 10 a. m., Feb. 23, at the Farm Bureau office in Circleville and the other school at 10 a. m., Feb. 24, at the Citizen's bank in Ashville.

It is pointed out that each year farm accounts are kept, the more valuable they become to the operator as the basis of determining the most profitable system of farming and for making changes in the organization.

DAMAGE SUIT SEEKING $7,500 STARTED HERE

Emanuel Waite Claims E. J. Lighty, Jr., Hit Wagon With His Truck.

Emanuel Waite has filed an action for damages against E. J. Lighty, Jr., in common pleas court, in which he asks damages in the sum of $7,500.

The plaintiff claims that on Jan. 2, 1928, while driving a team of horses hitched to a wagon in a southerly direction on the Scioto trail, he was hit by the defendant's truck going in the same direction, just north of South Bloomfield, and his wagon was wrecked, a hog in the wagon he was hauling was killed, and his team of horses injured. He also claims that he was personally injured, and asks judgment to cover costs of medical attendance, injuries to himself and horses, and also for time lost.

J. F. Henderson, of Columbus, represents the plaintiff.

SUES FOR DIVORCE

Mary E. Lanman has filed a suit for divorce from Howard E. Lanman in common pleas court.

The parties were married in Covington, Kentucky, April 4, 1924, and she was deserted by her husband five days following her marriage, and she has not seen or heard from him since, the petition says.

She asks the court in her petition not only for a divorce on the ground of abandonment, but also asks to be restored to her maiden name of Mary E. Pontious.

Charles H. May represents the plaintiff.

he had been arrested and had served time in 1912 for forgery.

Ed Lowe was then recalled to the stand by the defense, but due to the continued argument of the attorneys over what was in the record, the jury retired from the court room. Lowe was then permitted to testify, over the objection of the prosecution, as to what was said when he went to the Byrd house to see if Flint was there, following the shooting.

Lowe was undergoing cross examination by Judge Abernethy, who is assisting the state, when court adjourned for the noon recess.

Mothers Must Watch These Seven Points in Care of Baby

Try to Check Up Peacock Feathers on Your Own Personality

By DR. LOUIS E. BISCH

WE all have our strong points and our weak points and it is the blending of these character traits that, like a composite picture, reveal our personalities.

Few of us separate the wheat from the chaff when it concerns ourselves and hence many do not understand why their personalities are weak or strong or neutral, as the case may be.

Consider the following and see how you measure up.

Are you truthful?

I do not mean whether you tell lies to others. Do you lie to yourself? Do you invariably "call a spade a spade" when it concerns yourself, even if it hurts?

Are you loyal?

Can your friends and associates and family invariably bank on you? Do you possess "stick-to-it-iveness"?

Are you steady in pushing forward even if your job is distasteful?

Do you know English?

Of course you can make yourself understood. But are you able to handle the language in a way that is clear, concise, idiomatic and effective?

Do you know how to dress?

Expensive clothes is not what I mean. Do you achieve distinction in your dress? Are your clothes an ornament to you, enhancing your appearance, or do you look as though you were taking your clothes out for a walk?

Are you tactful?

Do people like you? Are you negatively bestowing praise? Do you work well with other people? Are you successful at team-work?

Are you sensitive?

Are you continually on the alert looking for slights? Are you suspicious about the motives of others? Can you stand criticism?

Are you friendly?

Do you like meeting people and mingling with them?

Are you cheerful?

Do you bring your head when things go wrong and make others feel as though they were to blame?

Do you look healthy?

Is your gait elastic and vigorous? Does your voice suggest strength and force? Is your breath sweet and clean and are your teeth in perfect condition?

Do you look guilty?

So many individuals go about looking as though they had committed some criminal offense and were about to be apprehended any minute. Have you the strength of your own convictions?

Do you really know what you want?

Can you make up your mind? Can you resist persuasion and suggestion until logic and reason are presented to make you change?

Are you a procrastinator?

Do you tend to put off until tomorrow what you might quite readily do today?

Study these points carefully.

Check each one and see how you score.

Don't do it hastily. Think it over before you bring in a verdict on yourself.

To recognize yourself for what you really and honestly are, is the first big, constructive step toward improvement.

THERE is an old Japanese proverb which says: "When all praised the peacock's tail, the birds cried 'Look at his legs, and what a voice!'" Also there is a Scotch saying, "Bonny feathers dinna aye mak' bonny birds." Of course, to offset these maxims we have "Fine feathers make fine birds," as well as the old French proverb, "Clothes do much to make a man." So that all these sayings seem almost paradoxical. And in these modern times how often one hears from the lips of one of the fair sex the disparaging remark, "Of course she is attractive. With all the gorgeous clothes she is wearing anyone would look beautiful." Fortunately, much might be said on both sides. The proud beauty adorned with exquisite jewels, and fine peacock feathers may lack nothing in fascination and may easily conquer many hearts. On the other hand, the bewitching unadorned maiden who smiles so wistfully certainly possesses a great deal of charm, character and allurements. So one must say, each one to his taste.

TREAT THE INFANT AS GROWING FLOWER

Give It Fresh Air, Sunshine, Good Food, Plenty of Water, Sleep and Exercise and It Will Thrive.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

SEVERAL years ago I prepared a brief outline of the particularly important things every mother should know about the care of her baby. Of course, I was not seeking to give any information to the experienced mother, the parent of several children.

But every year there are thousands upon thousands of new mothers. I know they will be glad to receive anything that may help to make their little ones happy and well.

Suppose I outline these things under seven heads:

AIR AND SUNSHINE.
A baby is a beautiful flower in God's garden. Treat it as such. During certain hours every day in the year, except in the rare time of a terrible storm, the baby should be taken out-of-doors.

Fresh air, day and night, is absolutely necessary.

FOOD.
The feedings must be accurately and carefully made. In their preparation, clean hands and clean utensils are essential.

The baby must be fed at regular times. You must be regular as clockwork in this matter.

WATER.
Two-thirds of the weight of the human body is water. All the functions are carried on by organs and tissues which must be kept moist. To this end lots of water must be given the baby.

Don't wait till the infant suffers from thirst and cries in protest. Give cooled boiled water at regular intervals.

SLEEP.
A normal infant sleeps from twenty to twenty-four hours out of every twenty-four. All the surroundings must be arranged with reference to comfortable and undisturbed sleep.

CLEANLINESS.
Whether you believe in the germ theory or not, you certainly believe in cleanliness. Never forget that body, nose, mouth, the clothing, feeding outfits and all the toys of the infant must be included in your efforts at cleanliness.

EXERCISE.
It is more important for the baby to use the muscles than it is for the grown-up. Spread a clean sheet or quilt on the floor in a sunny room and let the youngster stretch and kick and coo to its heart's content. This will develop strength and promote health.

Don't resort to "pacifiers," rubber rings and other things to chew on. Keep the thumbs out of the mouth. Start right and keep right as regards baby's habits.

These are seven important things to remember. I am sure your baby will thrive if you mind them all.

Best of luck to you, dear mother.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

Fussy Hoppy Toad Was Taught a Lesson.

MY goodness, but Hoppy Toad had a good opinion of herself, and she never lost a chance of telling her good qualities to her neighbors.

One day on her way back from the big pond, she happened to see Mrs. Beetle and her husband struggling with a ball of mud.

"You silly-looking things," she croaked. "What a foolish pastime for folks as old as you are anyway. Can't you find something better to do than play with mudballs? Gracious me, if I hadn't anything else to do, I'd learn how to do some of the clever things some of my neighbors do."

"Such as croak," snapped Mr. Beetle who was rather cross and tired, trying to push the mud-ball up a little raised place in the ground. "Or learn how to disturb others with singing. Not for me. I'd rather push this mud-ball."

"Certainly you would," croaked Mrs. Hoppy Toad, and that's just why you've never grown any larger than you are. Too small to take other folk's advice. Why, if I had to sit down and suck my hands, I wouldn't be caught rolling mud-balls."

"But, my dear," laughed Mama Beetle uneasily, "that's the only way we can get our children to hatch. We place the egg in this mud-ball and—"

"Goodness me, such stupid folks!" almost screamed Mrs. Hoppy Toad. By this time several of the meadow folks had collected to see what was the cause of the loud talking. "My goodness, neighbors, did you ever hear of folks trying to smother their young in a mud-ball?"

"Oh, I don't know," grumbled Granddaddy Longlegs, "but what

Mrs. Hoppy Toad Cried for Help.

that is a better plan than the one you have. Friends, I've often heard you wonder why Mrs. Hoppy Toad has no family. Why no one has ever seen her eggs. I'll tell you the reason. She takes her eggs down to the old mill-pond and tucks them in, before they have a chance to hatch. That's why no one has ever seen her with any children. And you let a creature like that tell you how to live. I think she should be made to go out to that mill-pond and gather up every egg I just saw her drop in there, and take care of them herself. Maybe the world's have so much time to tell other folks how to live."

By this time the whole crowd was ready for anything and they quickly surrounded Mrs. Hoppy Toad, dragged her down to the mill-pond. There's no telling what might have happened if Old Croaker Green Frog hadn't been sitting on the bank when they reached the mill-pond. When Mrs. Hoppy Toad, with tears in her eyes asked him to help her, he sat down and laughed.

"Zshaw, she doesn't mean any harm," Croaker Green Frog laughed merrily. "Mrs. Hoppy Toad has as big a family as any of you people, but they never in the world would hatch out, if she didn't drop her eggs into the pond. She'd look down in the bottom of the pond yonder," and he pointed to a crowd of queer little black wiggling things in the water. "Those are both Mrs. Green Frog's, and Mrs. Hoppy Toad's children. Folks call them polliwogs. When they are old enough, they will shed their tails, sprout legs and then they will be ready for their work in the meadows. Mama Green Frog's children hatch in the same way, but they always remain in the water while all Hoppy Toads must seek the dry land when they hatch. It would be a funny world if we all lived and thought alike. And with a mighty plunge Daddy Green Frog disappeared in the water."

The meadow folks looked sadly. They loosened their hold on Mrs. Hoppy Toad and after telling her how sorry they were for acting badly, they all went home.

But it taught Mrs. Hoppy Toad a lesson. She never again tried to tell any one how to live. She found it she lived right, she wouldn't have time to preach to others.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16.
The life of man is dependent upon psycho-magnetic vital forces permeating the air.

—Astrological Theorem.

An unusually interesting series of stellar forces promises a day of lively and interesting situations and events. This in business and personal affairs. An opportunity for change might be postponed as the time is not propitious but generally affairs should thrive, especially employment. New enterprises may be stimulated, particularly corporate interests and secret agreements.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a lively year and one of high adventure, but these should not include radical change of environment or travel. Agreements with new corporations or secret affiliations may prosper. A child born on this day may be bold and adventurous, with a tendency to travel and make frequent changes which would be inimical to really fine prospects.

Love's Embers

MADGE FINDS AN IMPATIENT DICKY UPON HER RETURN FROM THE TIGERS.

MRS. TIGER'S worried face and her parting words to me, "Madge, you and Miss Underwood can figure out some way of helping her," troubled me all the way back to the farmhouse. But I had to put them aside when I reached the veranda, for Dicky's frown told me that I had committed the unpardonable sin of keeping him waiting for luncheon. The fact that my absence had been upon an errand of his did not mitigate his impatience.

"For spading up the lettuce bed?" he exclaimed as I came up the steps, "have you and Mrs. Tiger been comparing family trees? They're having a fit in the kitchen because her omelet is being spoiled by waiting."

"Why didn't you go on and eat it then?" I asked with a carelessness which I know is more infuriating to him than any wrathful answer I could give.

Dicky's frown darkened, and I knew that he was as angry at himself for forgetting our pact of courteous formality as he was at my nonchalance. It is one of the hardest tasks my impulsive peppy husband has—this guarding his impatient speech when talking to me.

Lillian rose abruptly and walking across to me, thrust her hand beneath my elbow.

"Don't let him delay the game any longer," she said with superb impudence, "he may be able to get sustenance out of sawing the air and shouting, but I'm starving and I imagine you are. Your news will keep until after luncheon when Katie is safely back in the kitchen again."

She hurried me into the dining-room and Dicky followed us sulking. Fortunately Mother Graham was enjoying the luxury of a tray in her room, something in which we indulge her as frequently as she wishes it, so I did not have to meet her always certain displeasure when anyone keeps a meal waiting, and the others at the table were not captious.

But Dicky was magnificently dour, and elaborately courteous. When the meal was over and we three were again upon the veranda—I had signaled Katherine to see that we were not disturbed—Lillian put both hands upon the lapel of his coat and shook him vehemently.

"Look here, young fella me lad," she said, explosively, "I'm not used to this rarefied air and I refuse to breathe it any longer. Just take a nose dive or hand me a parachute. I don't care which."

No matter how stubbornly angry Dicky is, Lillian is always able to bring him to time, chiefly, I fancy, because he knows the absolute futility of arguing with her. She has an uncanny faculty of always winning the victory in any contention. But when he took her hands from his shoulders and kissed her with apparent friendliness, I guessed that in reality he was yearning to box her ears. That Lillian shared my conjecture I knew when she laughed indignantly at him.

"The stage idea with a yen for a slap in the mind of the kisser—and the kisses"—she said. "But it will do. Go on, Madge, spill the beans. What did Mrs. Tiger say?"

With the reservation of most of Mrs. Tiger's conversation for Lillian's private ear, I told of my neighbor's assurance that no news of the sketches would go out from the Tiger family.

"And I put the fear of God into Katie and all the rest of the family here while you were gone," Lillian commented. "They're all sewed up for the winter. But what about Noel Veritzen and young Mr. Jackson? They spend a good deal of time at The Larches, don't they? Do they know about the sketching?"

What You Should Weigh

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

LAST week I promised to print a weight scale that has been approved by fashion experts, beauty specialists and doctors, a reliable standard upon which to base her own needs for reducing or gaining weight.

In the compilation of this chart of weights two basic things were considered—physical health and beauty.

Without health there can be no true beauty and with health there is a sound structure upon which to build beauty.

The table of weights is for women and is based entirely upon age and height. For example, the fifteen-year-old girl who is four feet and eight inches tall should weigh one hundred and one pounds.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

In Which She Attends the Opening of a New Play.

I HAVE copied the following letter into my diary, written to my friend, Nan:

"Dear Nan:

"It's simply ages since I've written you, but we've been frightfully busy. Everybody seems to be going somewhere, either south or to the mountains, and they all have to have something to go in. Hence, our popularity."

"As a special treat, Madame gave me two tickets, the other day, for the opening of a new play. I adore going to openings—you can see everybody even if everybody doesn't see you. John said the play was good. I'm sure I don't know—I'm always so interested in the pageant going on in front of the footlights that I pay hardly any attention to what is being enacted in back of them."

"I saw several of our dresses. Young Julie Cordie, entertaining a box party of her school friends, looked simply darling in a salmon-colored moire frock I modeled for her recently."

"An amusing thing happened before the first curtain rose. The Kenneth Fergusons, looking stunning and knowing it, marched impressively to their seats in the center of the second row. He is elderly and pompous and terribly impressed with his own importance. Realizing his seat, he surveyed the audience with great assurance as he pulled off his top-coat. BUT—he did not know he was drawing off, at the same time, the jacket of his evening suit. Otherwise, he could not have stood with such assurance of manner, surveying the audience in his vest and shirt sleeves! It was simply grand. When he finally discovered his condition, he collapsed like a punctured balloon."

"Mrs. Ferguson looked very smart in one of our evening wraps. The 'Blue Night' model—a sapphire blue velvet with collar and bands of ivory like it."

The Velvet and Ermine Make a Stunning Evening Wrap.

It is made simply and has no goals of distinction.

"You never have written me your decision about the evening cloaks I described to you several weeks ago. I'm sending you a sketch of 'Blue Night'—it could be copied easily, if you like it."

Famous Composers

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

Pierre Leonard Leopold Elnoit.

ONE of the foremost of the Flemish composers, Pierre Benoit, who afterwards changed the "Pierre" to "Pete," when he endeavored to found an entirely Flemish school of music, was born in Harlebeke, Flanders, on August 17, 1834.

In 1851, Benoit entered the Brussels Conservatory, his earlier studies having been directed by his father and an organist in the town where he was born. While at the conservatory, where his studies were directed chiefly by Fetis, Benoit wrote a "small opera" which was produced in the Park Theater, where he afterwards became conductor. In 1856, he won the Prix de Rome with his cantata "Le Meurtre d'Abel."

The money which this award carried, enabled Benoit to travel through Germany, where he studied in Berlin, Munich, Dresden and Leipzig. In 1861, the Theatre Lyrique in Paris, accepted one of his operas, and while waiting for its production, Benoit acted as conductor at the Bouffes Parisiens. However, his opera was not produced in Paris, and Benoit returned to Antwerp.

In 1867, he founded the Flemish School of Music, which later was instituted as the Royal Flemish Conservatory and Benoit was appointed Director.

Benoit's dream was to found a school of typically Flemish musical composition, but his own compositions show the strong influence of French and German music.

In addition to his prolific musical compositions, Benoit also wrote a number of essays on musical subjects.

His sacred music embodies Benoit's theories of Flemish music to a greater extent than any other of his compositions. The finest example of this is the tetralogy consisting of the "Messe Solennelle," the "Cantata de Noel," a "Te Deum," and a "Requiem."

Benoit died in Antwerp, on March 8, 1901, without reaching the goal which he had set as his life work.

A most individual sports suit of dull green tweed, belted with bright green leather, and with a collarless jacket and a gored skirt. A sweater woven in the same design as the tweed only in a lighter shade, is worn with the suit.

A most distinguished suit of black oxford cloth has an arrangement of pin tucks down the front of the skirt that is both attractive and new.

The irregular note seems to have taken a firm hold on feminine fashions. First of all, we had the irregular hemline, then the irregular neckline. It was not long before waistlines followed suit, and now we have hats becoming irregular; that is, hat brims.

STOCK GROUPS OF OHIO WILL HAVE MEETING

Farmers From More Than 60 Counties to Attend Gatherings in Columbus.

Farmers from more than 60 Ohio counties are expected to attend the annual meeting of the Ohio Livestock Cooperative Association and the Ohio Wool Growers Cooperative Association which will be held in Columbus Feb. 21 and 22. A large number will represent Pickaway county.

A feature of the two day meeting will be a welcome from J. F. Walker, one of the organizers and for several years field secretary of the wool growers association. Mr. Walker recently returned from an eight month trip of inspection of sheep and wool growing sections of Australia, South Africa and Europe, as agent for the United States Department of Agriculture.

Delegates are Named Local meetings of wool growers in all sections have been held and delegates selected for the meeting. The association has the largest membership of any wool co-operative in the country, and has been operating ten years.

Livestock producers who gather for their annual meeting will hear reports of the most successful year in the history of co-operative livestock marketing in Ohio, according to F. G. Keener, secretary of the association. In addition to reports and talks of Ohio livestock leaders, C. B. Denman of Missouri, president of the National Livestock Producers Association will be on the program.

Widely Known Speakers The annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Producers Co-operative Commission Association, a terminal marketing unit of the livestock co-operatives will be held on the evening of Feb. 21. C. A. Stewart, secretary of the National Livestock Producers Association and E. M. Underwood, market supervisor for the packer and stockyards administration of the Government will be the speakers.

Livestock and wool men will hold a joint banquet on Feb. 22, with a program of entertainment only.

SEEKS MEMBERS ON MONTH'S ODD DAY

Thousands of Ohio farmers will use their extra day in February in urging other farmers to join the Farm Bureau, according to President E. C. Rector, of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau. A state-wide "Give a Day Campaign," was inaugurated when farmers from all parts of the state gathered at the recent annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation in Columbus.

"More than 4000 people, including officials of state and county farm bureaus and those connected with affiliated groups, have been mailed pledge cards for the campaign," reports President L. B. Palmer of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. "Several hundred of these have already been signed and returned. While February 29 is the extra day we are asking volunteers to give any day of their own choosing during February."

Reports of members of the farm bureau in Ohio showed a slight increase for 1927, and delegates at the recent state meeting felt that the present membership could be increased materially.

English Town Holds Court For 19 Years Without a Criminal

LONDON, Feb. 15 —(INS)—Thetford, an ancient borough in Norfolk with a population of 5,000 claims to be the most law-abiding spot in the world.

There are figures to support its proud contention. For the nineteenth time in succession, the quarter-session court has just been held with no one to be summoned before the bar of justice charged with a crime.

Although there are 27 saloons in the borough, there has not been a drunkenness charge entered on the docket for many years. "We are proud of our record," Mayor T. R. Doran said, "Thetford is a comparatively small borough, but I think the absence of crime is unequalled anywhere."

Mayor Doran could not advance any particular reason for Thetford's spotless reputation, but expressed the belief that lawlessness may have been flogged out by the citizenry in the early days of the borough's existence, during the days of Queen Elizabeth.

FAILURE TO AGREE ON INTERNATIONAL LAW LOOMS AT CUBAN CONFERENCE

DELEGATES SHY AT PROPOSALS TO AVOID WAR

United States and Argentine Again Split On Issue Of Armed Vessels.

HAVANA, Feb. 15 — (INS) — With the final session of the full Pan-American conference set for next Monday, the most important commission of the gathering—that on international law—was ready today to attempt to arrive at some decision on the most important issues of its program.

Unless some decision is arrived at quickly, the commission stands to face with the prospect of recording a signal failure to achieve its aims.

Project Side-Track

The most comprehensive project before the commission came into the debate last night and, after two hours of futile discussion the proposition designed to prevent war in the western world by providing an elaborate machinery for the "Pacific Settlement of International Conflicts," was hurriedly referred to a sub-committee for study and action.

The project's great mass of details deals with good offices and mediation, commissions of investigation, conciliation, friendly composition and arbitration. All this is intended to prevent war between the American republics.

The substance of the project has been before the commission for four weeks, but it was not until last night that it came up for discussion.

Argentine Opposes

There is also the prospect that the issue of rights and duties of nations, involving the delicate question of intervention, will be lost in the rush of the final sessions. Next Thursday has been set as the date of a meeting of the commission in an effort to speed through some sort of understanding acceptable to all.

The United States and Argentina, already at odds on economic barriers and intervention, are at odds on the question of armed merchant ships in time of war. Argentina asked that such ships be considered war vessels. The United States, Uruguay, Panama, and Cuba voted against this.

U. S. Tobacco Experts Ask Bigger Salaries Of Egyptian Government

CAIRO, Feb. 15 — (INS) — The charms of Egypt with all its Eastern lure is not sufficient to attract hard headed American experts in tobacco-growing whom the Egyptian government wanted to invite.

American experts seem to feel that a year in America is worth two in Egypt, asking Egypt to pay them just double the salary while they earn in America.

The Egyptian Minister in Washington has informed his government that two experts whom he consulted have asked $10,000 a year each, although their salaries in America were between $5,000 and $5,600.

LOVERS UNITED IN SUICIDE PACT?

Inset (circle) shows Della Alexander, 19-year-old senior at William Penn High School, Philadelphia, who was found fatally shot in a lonely road in Haverford, Pa., with her fiancé, Louis Shapiro, also slain. They had previously tried to elope, but failed. General photo shows where bodies were discovered.

Poem On Masonry By Franklin Is Found In Old Journal Of Society

The following poem appeared in the Masonic Journal some 60 years ago. It was handed to The Herald by Wilson H. Moyst, who has had it in his possession ever since. Members of the Masonic order will readily recognize the significant wording of the different stanzas.

ARE YOU ONE OF THE BAND?

The verses below were the words of Benjamin Franklin. He knocked at a door of a lodge in London, and was asked by the master, "Who are you?" He replied in the following words:

I am one of the band
Who will faithfully stand—
In the bonds of affection and love;

I have knocked at the door,
Once wretched and poor,
And there for admission I strove.

By the help of a friend,
Who assistance did lend,
I succeeded an entrance to gain,
Was received in the "West,"
By command from the "East,"
But not without feeling some pain.

Here my conscience was taught,
With a moral quite fraught
With sentiment holy and true;
Then onward I traveled
To see it unraveled
What Hiram intended to do.

Very soon in the "East"
I made known my request,
And "Light" by command did attend;

When, lo, I perceived,
In due form, revealed,
A Master, and Brother, and Friend.

Thus far I have stated
And simply related,
What happened when I was made free,

But I've "passed" since then,
And was "raised" up again
To a sublime and ancient degree.

Then onward I marched,
That I might be "Arch'd"
And find out those treasures long lost,

When behold a bright flame
From the midst of which came
A voice, which my ears did accost.

Through the "veils" I then went,
And succeeded at length,
The "Sanctum Sanctorum" to find,

But the "Signet" I gained

And quickly obtained
Employment which suited my mind.

In the depth I then wrought
And most carefully sought
For treasures so long hidden there,

And by labor and toil
I discovered rich spoil,
Which are kept by the Craft with due care.

Having thus far arrived,
I further contrived,
Among valient Knights to appear
And as Pilgrim and Knight
I stood ready to fight—
Nor Saracen foe did I fear.

For the widow distressed
There's a chord in my breast;
For the helpless and orphan I feel,
And my sword I could draw
To maintain the new law,
Which the duty of Masons reveal.

Thus I have received
(Yet wisely concealed),
What the "Free and Accepted"
Well know,
I am one of the "Band,"
Who will faithfully stand,
As a brother wherever I go.

War Minister Painleve Is Late For Wedding

PARIS, Feb. 15 — (INS) — At the recent marriage of the daughter of former Minister of Finances M. Francois-Marshall, Minister of War, Painleve, came in very late—as is his usual custom.

"Where is the bride?" he inquired breathlessly of the door-keeper.

"In the sacristy" was the reply, and he hurried toward the door which was shut. The sacristan would not let him in.

"But, I'm the Minister of War" he insisted.

"But that's no reason why you should enter. Nobody can come in here now."

So Painleve quietly went away, thinking that there were other than military guards in Paris.

Prehistoric Mound

Moundsville, W. Va., owes its name to Grave Creek mound, 79 feet high and 820 feet in circumference, the largest prehistoric monument of its kind in America.

Many objects of interest including a stone bearing inscriptions which have never been deciphered were found in partial explorations of the mound's interior.

ADVISE USE OF "ACCRUAL BASIS"

Gives Farmer Advantage in Filling Out Tax Returns On Held-Over Crops.

Farmers, in computing income tax returns, may find it to their advantage to use the "accrual basis" or inventory system, it is pointed out by C. R. Arnold of the department of rural economics of the Ohio State University. Farmers have the choice of reporting on a basis of cash receipts and expenditures, or upon a basis of the inventory taken at the end of each year.

For the inventory or "accrual basis" the gross profits are obtained by adding to the inventory value of livestock and products on hand, at the end of the year, the amount received from the sale of stock and products and other miscellaneous items such as hire of teams, machinery and the like during the year, and deducting from this sum the inventory value of stock and products on hand at the beginning of the year plus the cost of stock and produce produced during the year, whether paid or not.

Upon the basis of records of cash receipts and disbursements, the farmer may in a given year run his receipts very high by holding over a crop or produce or livestock and selling that commodity as well as the crop of the current year. This will be avoided by the accrual basis method, which shows the steady growth from year to year if a man will keep annual inventories with his record of receipts and expenses.

Would Aid Farmers Buy Reclaimed Land

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15 — (UP) — Establishment of a credit fund to aid farmers settling on reclaimed lands is proposed by the Interior Department in announcing a reclamation settlement conference to meet in Washington tomorrow and Wednesday.

Only seven per cent of those desiring to settle on land reclaimed by the department have $5,000 or more, which is considered necessary to equip properly a farm without borrowing money, the statement points out, and urges the need of either federal or state credit funds to help these persons.

Among the subjects to be considered at the conference is the advisability of asking Congress for legislation to promote settlement on irrigated land and facilitate farm development.

Gives Free Auto Rides With Sermon

STEYNING, Eng., Feb. 15 — (UP) — The Pastor of a scattered parish near here has discovered the way to secure a good attendance at his church on Sundays.

Each Sunday before the service the preacher takes his car to regular calling places some distance from the church. Whether the day is stormy or fair, he never fails to gather enough people to fill his church.

Everyone who attends gets a free ride after the service to the point where he was picked up.

IF FARM IS FRYING PAN, CITY IS FIRE

Boys Who Leave Agriculture Don't Better Condition By Making Change.

"Formal education" to the extent of a year or more of high school education, "seems to encourage the farm boy or girl to desert farming and the farm, for some other occupation. But when he does leave the farm, the chance is better than 50-50 that he will wind up as an unskilled laborer in a city, which position, insofar as social prestige is concerned, is decidedly less attractive than that of the operator of a farm.

These conclusions are based upon a closely conducted survey of two typical northwestern Ohio townships, made by C. E. Lively and P. G. Beck, of the Rural Sociology Department of the Ohio State University.

The two sociologists discovered that a half more of the children who had started for themselves after a year or more of high school, went away from the farms, as compared with the children who never obtained high school training. Of those who left the farm for other jobs 75 per cent became laborers, and 60 per cent, unskilled laborers. Of those who stayed on the farm, 83 per cent became farm operators, either owning or renting their farms, but at any rate controlling their own activities. Only 17 of them became laborers on other men's farms.

"So far as social status is concerned, it would seem, therefore, that more than half of those who left the farm have not bettered their condition," says the report of the sociologists.

Mexico Hurries Work On Irrigation Plans

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 14 — (UP)

—Work on the irrigation projects started by the Calles administration will be pushed so as to be as nearly complete as possible by the time President Calles leaves office. President Calles already has directed the expenditure of $6,000,000 on irrigation works.

The total amount of land reclaimed through the efforts of the Calles administration is placed at 750,000 acres, of which 450,000 were irrigated during the last year.

One hundred and twenty thousand families have received land grants, many on the newly reclaimed lands. Cooperative rural banks have loaned $250,000 for the development of farms.

KILL CORN BORER BY CLEAN-UP NOW

Dry, Bright Winter Weather Fine For Breaking Stalks And Burning Trash.

Life for the corn-borer may be made a little more uncomfortable during February, if the standing corn-stalks which he is inhabiting are broken down and burned during this month. "Farm Practices Under Corn Borer Conditions," a recent bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, makes this suggestion. C. R. Arnold of the rural economics department of the Ohio State University, is one of the authors contributing to this bulletin.

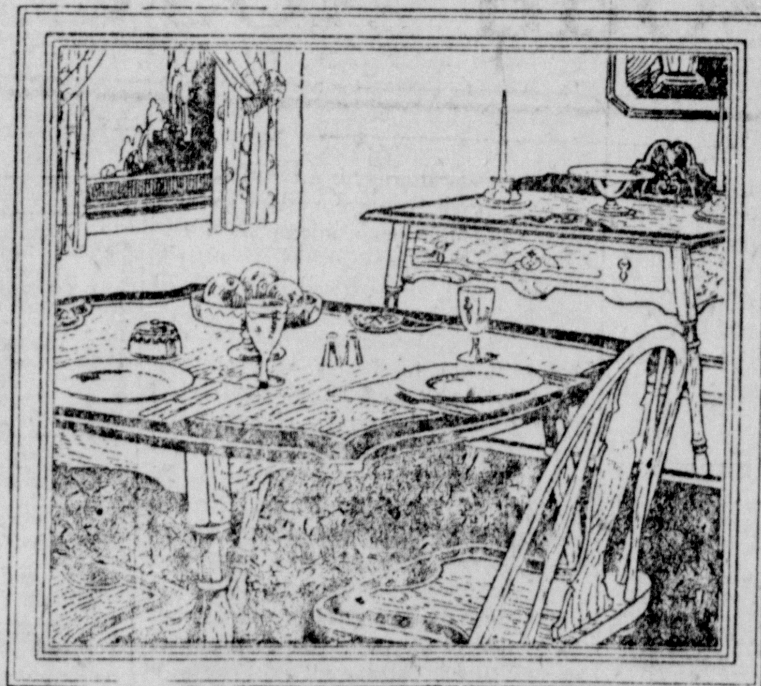

"This time of year when corn-borer clean-up operations may be performed to best advantage is almost as important to farmers as is the amount of this work to be done," says the bulletin. "As much of this extra work as is possible should be done before the rush of spring work begins.

"In January or February the standing stalks may be broken off with a T-rail or pole, if there is a period when the ground is frozen and free from snow. If the stalks are frozen dry they may also be raked and burned at that time. This will reduce considerably the amount of clean-up work to be done later in the spring. Any bright, dry weather in winter should be utilized in destroying cobs and trash, especially corn-stalks, around the barns and feed lots."

Trapped by Catnip

It is not the purring house cat alone that is irresistibly attracted by the smell of that strange drug, catnip. The spell runs through the entire family, according to the American Druggist, which reports that a compound of artificial catnip is being used effectively to trap the bobcats and mountain lions that infest the far-western mountain regions.
